

None of you want to look at yourself. None of you truly wants to see all of those places within you that you perceive are bad parts. But if you don't look, how will you ever see the good parts of you?

A Rain Drop

A Tree That Whispers....

The ability to tap in and to hear from the ten dimensions has always been yours as human beings. And through the ages there have been those who have spoken for a number of reasons, some of which have been for their own glorification. This book is not about glorification.

The words within this book are teachings and information for life. The most useful thing is to test them against life. To discover them. To allow some of the answers to flow from the page to the heart and from the heart to the hand and from the hand to life. To make the changes, not because something is broken, but because you can. This book is not about human beings saying how you should live your life. This book is about life's expansion of self.

Therefore nothing is spoken about the persons who allowed this speaking. Nothing is spoken about the human beings and their frailties and their participation, who have done their best to place it into written form. And where there may be small errors in the teaching because of editing, look to the larger good of the whole document.

It's a tree that whispers... as well as a rock that speaks and a stream that sings. It is the ocean and the cacophony of sounds that is orchestrated from that. Let it whisper in your ear. Let yourself read it and digest it. Perhaps return to read again. Let it be a point of curiosity, if nothing else.